YALE'S MEN VICTORIOUS

did some heavy work in line-bitting and tackled superbly. McBride, besides kicking fairly well, made strong gains at center.

The Princeton backs petered out against Yale's defense. Reiter and Kelly did the lion's share of ground-gaining.

Yale's team play was almost perfect. There were no slips in the signals, and the attacks were directed at the right spot in every instance. The game was in no way hampered by a historical standpoint, and nobody of those injured will suffer any serious effects.

The officials performed their duties competently, though it was not until almost dark that the last play was made. The crowd numbered out of 10,000, and it was well handled.

Yale entered the field at 2 o'clock, led by Capt. Rodgers. Princeton soon followed, headed by Cochran and Baird. There was no delay. The captains shook hands, and then the coin was tossed. Cochran called it, and chose the northern goal, so that the Tigers might take advantage of the wind.

Chamberlain kicked off. Baird returning to McBride, who muffed. De Saules took the ball on Yale's 30-yard line. McBride again punted to Princeton's 50-yard line. On the line-up following, Edwards landed a heavy swing on Chadwick's head, and was warned. The Tigers now began on Yale's line. Wheeler and Bennett made through the Yale tackles for eight yards, and Reiter made ten on a tandem play. The Princeton rosters were on their feet.

Bennard gained again, and the line-up was on Yale's 45-yard line. Reiter got three yards, but the ball went to Yale for holding. Edwards and Chadwick again became involved in a little slugging match, but were unpunished. It was Yale's turn to find out something about Princeton's defense. Bennett made a yard and Dudley, after on Princeton's left wing, Bennett and Rodgers made pretty gains, and then the Tigers traced up and Chamberlain resisted to a short punt, which Baird caught and returned. Rodgers muffed, but De Saules was there, and it was the Blue's ball. Dudley failed to gain and McBride punted miserably, while the New Jersey contingent roared with delight.

"Now, lead them up, Princeton!" came in a volley as the Tigers lined up for a vicious attack. Bennett hit the line at Rodgers and Chadwick and only got a yard. Bennett at the same place made three. Bennett and Wheeler made short gains, but Yale twice kicked up a terrific back formation, and it was Yale's ball on downs.

Princeton soon began to realize that Yale's line was stronger than anybody had believed. Dudley began some heavy line-bucking and made nine yards on three tries, but to no avail, for Princeton got the ball for holding. Bennett, cleverly tackled by Rodgers, dropped the ball and Rodgers fell on it. Princeton's center put up a great defense, so much so that McBride had to kick. Baird returned regularly to De Saules. Cochran tackled the little Yale quarterback fiercely and injured his shoulder, but would not leave the game.

In the interchange of punts which followed De Saules made a bad muff on Yale's 20-yard line. Hildebrand made a dive, but Dudley made a grand play by falling on the oval probably preventing a Princeton score. McBride punted feebly and Princeton began a fierce line attack to Yale's 30-yard line. Yale held them here and Baird dropped back for a goal from the field. Booth made a wild pass and Chamberlain fell on the ball in the middle of the field. The Tigers were losing their bearings. Bennett and Dudley made one gain, but Rodgers and McBride failed in line-bucking and Princeton got the ball on downs. It was here that Chadwick, with a feeling of resentment, caused a laugh by deliberately stamping on Bennett's foot. Princeton's attack amounted to very little and Baird punted. De Saules muffed but the Tigers lost a royal chance to get it. Hildebrand, Cochran, and Craig fell over themselves and the ball and McBride secured it.

Root after Root again tried for a field goal but Crawford let Brown through. That the Princeton line was weakening was shown when, a minute later, Chadwick successfully blocked Baird's kick. Bennett getting the ball, The Yale backs forced the ball to the Princeton 25-yard line, where it stayed, after an interchange of punts. The line-up was in the ground line, the ball sailing clear to Yale's 20-yard line. More punting, in which Baird excelled and De Saules made a catch on Yale's 40-yard line. With no interference, he began dodging until he had worked his way through the entire Princeton line, being caught only at Princeton's 25-yard line after covering forty-five yards. Such cheering as the Yale men did was rather equated.

From the start the second half was not Baird, for Princeton, kicked off. McBride punted. Wheeler interchanged punts. De Saules and Bennett landed the ball on Princeton's 40-yard line, and McBride kicked to Baird, who was nailed by Hall. He passed to Wheeler, who was dragged over the goal line, but the referee ordered him away from the line. Baird kicked to the 30-yard line, and the referee ordered him away from the line. Princeton's 40-yard line. There was six and a half minutes left to play, and Princeton adherents did not lose hope. Yale secured the leather on downs and the Blue's backs began a fine onslaught, taking the ball to the 25-yard line. Booth had to leave in favor of Dickey. The ball was carried to Princeton's 60-yard line, where De Saules' fumble lost a yard, and time was called with the ball eleven yards from the Tigers' goal line. It was Yale's victory and it had been fairly won.

THE GOALS AT KENDALL GREEN.

Gallaudet's Win in a Contest With Western Maryland College.

The game of football between the Western Maryland College eleven and the Gallaudet's Kendall Green yesterday forenoon was one of the best, as well as the most interesting of the season.

In several years. The game started with the kick-off by Western Maryland for forty-five yards. After returning the ball eighteen yards, Barham was given it, and he drove through the visitors' center for a magnificent run of eighty-five yards, to goal.

Peter, who was interfering, made a foul play on the visitors' 30-yard line, and the ball was called back and given to the opponents at that point. The Gallaudet's entered the ball on their 45-yard line, and assumed a vigorous offensive, rushing the ball to the visitors' 10-yard line. Here the latter made a strong rally, got the ball down, and returned it to the Gallaudet's 35-yard line. The latter then securing it advanced steadily for a touchdown, which was made in twenty-four and a half minutes.

In the second half the visitors turned the tables. Twice they forced the ball to within a yard or two of the Gallaudet's goal, but could not get it over. The home team would then return the ball twenty or thirty yards, and lose again on downs. The visitors' third attempt succeeded, but try at goal failed. During the remaining five minutes the Gallaudet's steadily advanced the ball to the opponents' goal. This game leaves Gallaudet and St. John's to decide the championship of the Interstate Athletic Association, in their game at Annapolis December 4.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR DISPUTES.

Points Upon Which Master Workmen Entertain Different Views.

There appears to be a decided difference of opinion between Mr. A. M. Lawson, master workman of District Assembly No. 66, Knights of Labor, and the newly elected master workman of the order, as to the reason why the local assembly was refused representation in the general assembly, which met a few days ago in Louisville, Ky.

Mr. Hicks, the new master workman, stated to The Times that the local assembly was clearly the transgressor when it refused to carry out the order of the last general assembly, to expel two of its members against whom there were charges. However, a day or two before the assembly adjourned, at his suggestion District Assembly No. 66 was given a "clean bill of health" and he hoped it would now fall in line and aid in building up the order in the District.

In an interview with Mr. Lawson yesterday, he said that the statement alleged to have been made by General Master Workman Hicks, relative to the reasons why District Assembly No. 66 had been refused representation in the annual general assembly, was certainly erroneous.

"If the statement were really made by the general master, it would show one of two things, either the head of the order was totally unacquainted with the facts in the case, or he had been listening to those who were prejudiced in the matter, and had personal motives in keeping up the factional differences."

"As to the general master workman giving District Assembly 66 a 'clean bill of health,'" Mr. Lawson added, "that was unnecessary, as the District Assembly had been and was still in a very healthy condition. There is, however, something by merely making a public assertion, which only tended to stir up the matter."

CREATING A LABOR UNION.

Press Feeders Effect a Permanent Organization.

The press feeders of the District of Columbia met in large numbers at Typographical Union hall last night and formed a local organization, under the jurisdiction of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America.

The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and prominent among those present were a number of Union press feeders employed in the Government Printing Office and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

IN THE WORLD OF LABOR.

The action of the General Assembly of the Knights of Labor in annual session at Louisville, Ky., last week, in refusing to seat Mr. A. M. Lawson, a representative of District Assembly No. 66, has been the chief topic of discussion in labor circles during the last week. Not only among the Knights of Labor of the city, but among the trades unions, has the matter been discussed from every possible standpoint.

Under such conditions they think they would be better off at it, once and for all. If such a course is determined upon by the local assemblies affiliated with District No. 66, the question which next presents itself is, where will they go; will they form an independent order, or join the ranks of the American Federation?

The latter is highly improbable. For, ever since the organization of the Federation, a feeling of intense unkindness has existed between the members of the two organizations.

If the local district assembly is unopposed in its action on the question, what is best to be done? and the local should decide to leave the order, it would be more likely to form an independent organization, which would be better off at it, once and for all.

On the other hand, while the various local assemblies may disapprove of the action of the General Assembly of the order to such a degree as to warrant their withdrawal, still they may conclude that they will be able to receive greater support, moral and financial, from their national trade organization than they possibly could from an independent local order.

Another phase of the matter which will demand the serious attention of the different local assemblies is, how they decide to withdraw from the Knights of Labor, is the disposition of their funds. According to the laws of the order the funds of the local assemblies are the property of the general assembly, and upon the withdrawal of any subordinate assembly must be turned over to the general secretary-treasurer. An assembly, however, while a member of the order can make any disposition its members see fit of its property. It can make it a gift to anyone it chooses or donate it for the benefit of a public or private charity.

There is, however, still another phase of the question. The lines of action suggested above, it is understood, are only possible when the District Assembly would act unanimously in the matter. If, however, a sufficient number of assemblies endorse the action of the general order and determine to maintain the organization of Assembly No. 66, the whole complexion of affairs will be changed.

At the meeting of District Assembly No. 66 last week the master workman's report of his trip to Louisville was eagerly looked for, but it was not forthcoming. He, however, made a brief verbal report, but this, it is said, did not satisfy the delegates, who insisted on having a report in detail at the next meeting.

It was stated that the master workman had completed his report, but his typewriter was disappointed at the last moment. The report, it is understood, will be quite lengthy, and deal with the subject of his rejection as a delegate in detail.

Obtains a Divorce.

A decree of divorce was granted yesterday by Judge Freeman from her husband, Israel Greenbaum. The plaintiff is allowed to resume her maiden name, Regina Stern. The plaintiff filed her petition on April 3, 1897. They were married on July 10, 1894, by Rabbi Johnson. One child, Morris Greenbaum, was born to them. The plaintiff charged desertion.

The meetings of all the central bodies held during the week were well attended, but no business of public importance was considered.

A proposition to have the vice president of the union an ex-officio member of the delegation to the Central Labor Union will also be considered.
